Wetermined That Mob Leaders and Boy Who Hurled Missile Shall Be Punished—Mr. McAdoo Projects Spe-ctally Policed Routes to Ferries.

Mrs. William C. Gotshall, who was struck

husband and Dr. William Polk, her physician.

After a delirious night she seemed to be better yesterday morning, and Mr. Gotshall went to be office, preparatory to attending a meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

At noon be was telephoned by Dr. Polk to go home quickly. Mrs Gotshall had relapsed into unconsciousness.

Dr. Polk-is unable to determine the exact character of the injury. He was unwilling to express an opinion yesterday further than that Mrs. Gotshall's condition was exceedingly precarious.

Capt. Herlihy of the East 104th street police station telephoned Mr Gotshall in the afternoon, asking him to accompany detectives through tenement houses on detectives: through tenement houses on 106th street, between First and Second avenues, where the Gotshalls were mobbed, to see if the Italian boy who threw the stone could be identified. Mr. Gotshall was unable to leave his wife s side.

"I am determined that the miserable wretches who led the mob's assault, and the boy who threw the stone, shall be found and punished," said Mr. Gotshall yesterday. "If my wife dies, I shall drop everything to find her cowardly assailant.

"Capt. Herlihy is showing the right kind of action, but if the policeman at Lexington avenue and 10th street had gone to the spot when I asked him, immediately after the assault, instead of carelessly turning on his heef and telling me it was no concern of his because it was off his beat, the wretch who threw the stone could have been caught. I was too angry and excited been caught. I was too angry and excited to take the man's number, but his superiors certainly know who was on that beat at that hour."

Capt. Herlihy and his plain clothes men went through the neighborhood yesterday searching tenements and interrogating Italians who live there, but without result. No arrests have been made.

searching tenements and interrogating Italians who live there, but without result. No arrests have been made.

As soon as Commissioner McAdoo reached Police Headquarters he ordered Capt. Herlihy to investigate and report on the case. The Commissioner said he had received a number of complaints from automobilists, and it is probable that the onslaught on the Gotshall party will result in some understanding by which automobilists will take certain routes going to and from the ferries. The Commissioner was working on a plan of that kind yesterday. He said the greatest number of complaints had come from East 110th and 104th streets and the Long Island ferry at Thirty-fourth street. Complaints have also been received from different parts of Brooklyn and from Long Island. City.

"There seems to be a determined effort to drive automobiles from the East Side," the Commissioner said. "The trouble appears to rise from the congested condition of these districts. Parents consider the automobiles a menace to their children.

of these districts. Parents consider the automobiles a menace to their children. This missile throwing is dangerous. Not only is such a mishap as that to Mrs. Gotshall possible any day, but the children themselves run a great risk. A stone thrown at a driver may cause him to lose control of his machine at any time. Then a turn of the wrist might send the machine crashing into a crowd, and loss of life would doubtless result."

The Commissioner received a handful, of takks vesterday from a well known of tacks yesterday from a well known New Byrker, who picked them up in a Brooklyn street. They had been placed points up, he said, evidently for the purpose of puncturing automobile tires.

CENSUS ESTIMATES DEFENDED. Director North Shows That They Are the

Most Reliable of All Methods WASHINGTON, May 23 .- S. N. D. North, Director of the Census, has written a letter to Secretary Cortelyou of the Department of Commerce and Labor defending the estimates of population recently issued by the Census Office. Criticism of the estimates has been made by cities where the figures fell short of the local estimates, and Director North, while acknowledging that in some instances the actual population of certain given places may be in excess of the census estimates, shows that the estimates are the most reliable of all methods of computation.

The estimate for each city, he says, rest upon a hypothesis that the annual increase of population since the census of 1900 is one-tenth of the total increase between 1890 and 1900, and the only deviation from this rule has been in the case of increases in territory, for which due allowance has been made after correspondence with the authorities of the cities affected. This method, the director asserts, has been found more reliable than any yet found the probable error being but 6 per cent. while estimates based upon the voting population run as high as 13 per cent.: the local enumerations for city directories showing a similar percentage of error. Local police censuses were equally inaccurate, as has been shown repeatedly by comparison with the Government enumerations. In conclusion, Dr. North says:

comparison with the Government enumerations. In conclusion, Dr. North says:

Turning now to the general results of the census method of projecting the population, as applied to the entire country, I call your attention to the remarkable accuracy that attends the computation when it concerns conditions which cannot be affected by local influences and variants. The estimated population of continental United States for 1900, as determined by this method on the basis of the increase from 1880 to 1890, was 75,414.181, while the actual population, as returned by the census of 1900, was 75,994.575. In other words, the actual population was 580,394 in excess of the estimate, showing the latter to be in error by three-fourths of 1 per cent. How far this neglible error is due to the influence of immigration cannot be determined.

If we project the population of continental United States for the entire decade in which we are now living, by the census method, we reach the conclusion that the thirteenth census in 1910 will show a population in the neighborhood of $8,041,438. This indicates a percentage of increase of 17.2, as compared with 30.7 in the decade 1880-1900. Events are possible in the future development of the country which will put this estimate awry from the actual census of 1916. Such a possibility exists under every method of estimating.

Mrs. Hoffman claimed that her husband, who is the grandson of John W. Ellis, the New York banker, left her in Paris and refused to provide for her, and that she had supported herself from the income from her father's estate. Papers were served on her husband in Paris, but he made no appearance in the case. Mrs. Hoffman is related to United States Senator George Peabody Wetmore and is the sister of Mrs. Harold Brown.

AGAIN THE CHICAGOS' VICTIMS

THE NEW YORK AMERICANS PLAY A LOOSE GAME. .

Griffith Into the Breach Too Late-St. Louis Dewn the Bostons, and Cleve-lands Take Philadelphias' Measure —Washingtons Vanquish the Detroits.

The New York Americans drew very close to fourth place yesterday by losing to Chicago. The Bostons and Philadelphias also received knockdown blows. Again, yesterday, were the Chicagos too nuch for the New York Americans. The game was Chicago's all the way. The visitors batted harder, fielded better, and on several occasions made the New Yorks look like second raters. Hughes was batted out of the box in the fourth inning. Had he been batted out in the first it would have been better for the New Yorks. The Chicagos hit him with men on bases, and his pitching was of inferior quality. The playing of the team in general in the early innings was loose, listless, without form and void.

New York's play tightened up and braced new forks play tegreened up and praced up when Griffith went into the box. It was the old sport's first try out this season in a league game, and he pitched with all the craft and artistic finish and workmanlike method that brought him to the forefront of box artisans who back up muscle with brain The Chicagos made three scattering hits sized the sad "what might have been" had he sized the sad what hight have been had he gone in earlier, for the game was very much Michigan avenue when he stepped into the breach. But sufficient for the day is the disappointment thereof. If Grif can keep t up he will broaden the strength of the pitching staff-one use brought to light by yesterday's adversity.

George Davis's shortstopping was edifying, entertaining, instructive. Davis played as well as he ever did in his life. His work was as fine as silk and as true as steel. He was as fine as silk and as true as steel. He had nine assists with never a quaver. His was a game of solid worth, embracing hard as well as easy chances, and with no fuss or frills whatever.

"Ducky" Holmes opened with a rasping triple to right centre. Fultz is lame and could not get after the ball as fast as ordinarily. Ganzel handled Jones's clip well and held Holmes at third, but Davis scored "Ducky" with a clean drive to right. A base on balls, a sacrifice and a hit made the outlook dark in the second, but Keeler doubled up Donohue at the plate, after taking McFarland's fig.

The New Yorks tossed runs in the air in the second. Conroy drew four balls, Ganzel fouled out and Thoney landed at first through the agency of an infield hit. McGuire singled to right and Conroy's misruided attempt to score on the hit was squelched by Green's throw to McFarland. Then Hughes singled. Davis got hold of the ball, but could not get Hughes. Instead he made a hurried throw to Isbell, hoping to force McGuire. Davis's stop held Thoney at third, but Thoney tried to score when Isbell failed to get hold of Davis's short throw. The ball rolled only a few feet and Isbell had it at the plate ahead of Thoney.

few feet and Isbell had it as the plate ahead of Thoney.

Altrock's hit, a wild pitch and Holmes's single to right gave the Chicagos a run in the third inning. Singles in succession by Donohue, Isbell and Tannehill, augmented by McGuire letting a throw-in get by him, gave the Chicagos two runs in the fourth. One Chicagoan was thrown out at the plate in the sixth, Conroy making a pretty stop and throw of Donohue's grounder. But Keeler had failed to hang on to Tannehill's long fly, and when McFarland, whose rap to Conroy had rendered possible the put-out at the plate, cut loose for second Tannehill stook a lead off third, Ganzel made a poor throw across the diamond and Tannehill scored.

Conroy and Ganzel hit safely in the ninth, and there was nobody out. Thoney drove a long fly to Jones, Klainow retired on a sharp grounder to Donohue and Griffith flied to Donohue. The score:
